one hoist in South Africa, suitably engraved. The queen was desirous of seeing the brave wounded lad, and to receive his photograph. His wound, from he has since recovered, was y his insisting on rushing onw ring line at the crossing of the rugeai, which his regiment tried to force the passage. The several efforts made to keep him back were of no avail. On his arrival in England, he was at once sent to Netley hospital to be cured. It was while a patient there that he was visited by Princess Christian and Princess Henry of Battenberg, who on behalf of Her Majesty asked the brave little warrior what he would like the Queen to do for him. "I hope," replied Dunn, "that Her Majesty will send me back to the front." The lad is not to be sent back of course, but instead, he has been award of a medal and three bars, having been present in three engagements. He is justly proud of such a reward, the more so, as his father has only two bars to his medal. Sergt. Dunn, his father, recently left for the front to join his regiment, the same as that in which his proud son joined. Portraits of Bugler Dunn are selling like hot cakes, while invitations are pouring in as numerous as are gifts of money. He prefers, at least for the present, to remain in the company of his mother. A bright career awaits the historical bugler, who so nobly distinguished himself. He is only 15 years of age, and the pet of everybody especially in Portsmouth, where he is now living with his mother. Sailors and soldiers take him shoulder high along the main street. Apart from the many pounds sterling given him by admirers, a fund has been opened for him; among the subscribers of the latter are the two little sons of the medical officer who attended him on the field of battle. Another lady has promised Dunn a gift each year on his birthday; while a public entertainment is projected also for his benefit, at which the hero of the hour will be present.

It is pleasing to learn that Lord Lansdowne, secretary of war, has lost no time in relieving public anxiety regarding the patriotic fund, which has evidenly gone wrong. The evil has been happily checked in time. The present commissioners no doubt suffer to a great extent for the sins of their predecessors. All the same there is a strong belief that the funds are not administered as they ought to be. The grave subject is well worth the trouble of a minute inquiry, and of an exhaustive investigation, the result of which will reveal to the public whether the report is false or otherwise.

Everything considered, trade continues to be wonderfully good, while the thought that after the war there is sure to ensue a reaction, greatly helps those who are temporarily depressed, with bright hopes. Those dropping of the big reef which has made the Rand famous. Mr. McMillan made some comparisons between the Transvaal and the Lake of the Woods district, and assured those present that he believed that with the many advantages this district possesses over that of South Africa mining could be more profitably conducted here than there.

From investigations he had made in the Rat Portage district he had found that the average value of the ore was much higher here than in the Rand. He believed that the big reefs that are just beginning to receive attention in the Lake of the Woods district would equal in productiveness the great reef of South Africa. He pointed out the great expense entailed in South Africa, noting particularly the great difficulty in securing water. He said that the mines there had to build immense dams and reservoirs for collecting the water during the rainy season. It required two reservoirs in fact, one above and another below the mill, from which the water was pumped back and used over and over again.

These immense reservoirs cost about $30,000 each. Besides this the cost of fuel and supplies was much greater than in the Rat Portage district. So that taking the low cost of operating and the higher value of deposits mining must be more profitable in Ontario than in the Transvaal. But it required capital to develop and the object of the chamber of mines was to furnish absolutely reliable information in order to establish confidence in the mines and mining interests here.

Considerable discussion followed Mr. Malcolm's address and he answered satisfactorily many pointed questions in regard to the operation of the Johnnesberg chamber.

Some discussion also ensued over the choice of a name, the one chosen being the Central Canada Chamber of Mines, with head office at Winnipeg.

A committee to complete the necessary steps of organization and outline the course of procedure for the future was elected composed of the following:

Gen. Sir Henry Wilkinson, George Macdonald, R. A. Mather, Robert Rogers, C. W. Chadwick, D. C. Cameron, D. L. Mather, W. A. Weir, F. R. Godwin, F. W. Stobart, R. H. Agur, A. M. Nanton, H. C. Hammond, H. H. Beck, J. S. Aikins, J. D. Crawford, J. K. Elliott, John Love, D. W. Bole, F. W. Drewry, H. S. Crotty, G. D. Woon, J. B. Monk, C. S. Hoare, C. A. Kennedy, Hon. Geo. A. Cox, H. F. Champion, F. W. Heubach.

The following is a list of the members, most of whom were present and took part in the discussions:

Gen. Sir Henry Wilkinson, London, Eng.; F. W. Stobart, R. H. Agur, A. M. Nanton, J. B. Monk, C. S. Hoare, J. S. Aikins, C. A. Kennedy, W. P. Sweatman, H. H. Simpson, R. R. Sutherland, R. J. Whitla, L. A. Nares, H. H. Beck, Ewart, Fisher & Wilson, W.

ignes they would most certainly advantage of it. In a city lest a working man can do a of every month is to lay is mighty lucky if while here the cost day and board. T to spend their money and to town, and it is an easy case of our Ontario miners to lay by $50 every month. Then the miners have good quarters, and food wholesome food, which is generally more than their city compeers have.

They may talk about the hardship of the poor miner, but if he wishes he certainly has a grand opportunity to better his condition. Some of these miners have locations of their own on which they work awhile after they have earned enough ahead, so the chances are that when the property is shown up to good advantage they will be able to dispose of them at good figures and perhaps retain an interest thereby becoming independent.

There are not many of this class at present in our Ontario gold fields, but if the force of this could be brought home to them, we are certain that a great deal of money would be wisely spent than is done at present.

If the prospectors, who are all able bodied men would do less loafing around hotels looking for millionaires and get to work and earn money to show up their prospects, thus proving beyond doubt that they have faith in their own properties which they are trying to get other people to invest in, it would be a great advantage to the mining industry in this section. There is certainly no excuse for men with prospects leaving them in the condition in which they are found. In many cases the prospector take up all he can find and then sits down waiting for some person manufactured of coin to come along and give about all his cash for an untouched prospect. This country has been said to be no place for a poor man, but if he has energy and is not afraid of work he must certainly win out in the long run. He can save more money here in less time than in any country we know of at present, and if he spends it judiciously it will bring better results also.

Weekly Mail.

We are informed by Reeve Parsons that there is now a weekly mail from Rat Portage to Fort Frances. It leaves Rat Portage every Wednesday, and returns from Fort Frances every Tuesday. This service is a direct result of the trip to Ottawa and Toronto of our representatives on the board of trade, Messrs Margach, Kyle, Gardner and Lewis. The weekly mail should greatly facilitate the transaction of business between the two places.

R. W. Smith, of Sherbrooke, arrived in town this morning from the east. Mr. Smith is the new representative of the Canadian Rand Drill and Jenckes Machine companies for Rat Portage and district.

PATRIOTIC WORDS

By Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Wilfrid Laurier, the Premier.

THE MANY ADVANTAGES OF CANADA

ELOQUENTLY PORTRAYED BY THE TWO LEADERS IN THE HOUSE.

Following are extracts taken from speeches delivered by Sir Charles Tupper and Sir Wilfrid Laurier in debating the address in reply:

Sir Charles Tupper: "You cannot show me today, on the face of the globe, a population equal to the population of Canada, enjoying greater advantages or enjoying the blessing of greater wealth, greater prosperity or greater progress. That is the position we occupy. How is it as to foreign aggression. We occupy this position but every person knows that not one foreign foot can touch the soil of Canada, no finger from any foreign power can be placed upon a Canadian without we have, as I have already shown you, in the magnificent reference to it by the hon. secretary of state for the colonies, Mr. Chamberlain, in which he said, surrounded by the right hon. prime minister and other premiers, that the great army and the unrivalled navies of England were not for aggression, but that they were evidence to the outlying portions of this great empire of their complete security and complete immunity from foreign aggression. Will you show me any people in any country in the world that enjoys these advantages on the terms that Canada enjoys them, with the most absolute the most perfect, as the right hon. gentleman has stated, the most complete independence, enjoying everything that complete independence can give us and standing today as part of the British Empire. We have the the fact that we are part of that great empire, under whose aegis all our rights and liberties are secured from foreign aggression. What is the position of any other country in the world compared with that of Canada? Countries, with the comparative resources and population of Canada are borne down with heavy, onerous, oppressive taxation to sustain an army arises, whenever the government feel they would be justified in taking the public money, leaving it to parliament to endorse their actions afterwards, they have the same power as in England to take that money in order to meet that emergency."

Sir Wilfrid Laurier urged: "The spectacle given today by England and her colonies is unique in the history of the world. It is unprecedented. The causes of the war are unprecedented. This war is not waged for conquest; it is not waged for territory; it is not waged for the subjugation of a proud people. The causes of the war may be summed up in a few broad, comprehensive lines. During the present century, especially during the last 60 years, there have sprung out of the wilderness of South Africa, to existence and into very great importance some five or six states. First the Cape, state in its broader, larger significance—the Cape, Natal, Rhodesia, the Orange Free State and lastly Transvaal. Two races, the English and Dutch, have founded these states and brought them to the condition in which they are today. Three of them, the Cape, Natal and Rhodesia, are British colonies. In two of them the legislative power belongs to the Dutch population. In all of them, the two races are more or less mixed and intermingled. In some of them the British population has the ascendancy in point of numbers. In others the ascendancy belongs to the Dutch population. The question is, how is the dominant power in every one of these states to treat and deal with the population of the other origin? How is England to treat and deal with the Dutch population under her domination? How are the Dutch population to treat their English fellow citizens? This is the problem which, in one form or another, has been exercising British statesmen and Dutch statesmen for a great many years. So far as England is concerned she has solved it in her usual liberal, high-minded, highly civilized methods. Wherever England has the sway, in the Cape, in Natal, in Rhodesia, she has given to the Dutch population every right and every privilege which is the birthright of her own children. Everything which he gives to the English speaking people she gives the Dutch speaking people. Everything she retains from the Dutch speaking people she retains from the English speaking people as well. On the other hand, in the Transvaal the Dutch government has refused to give to the English population those same rights and privileges which are willingly extended by Great Britain to the Dutch population in her own colonies. The law. With these grand ideals, these aspirations, these purposes before them, the colonies of Great Britain today stand behind her—not to give her assistance—she does not need that but to affirm to the world that the unity of the British empire is a real and living fact; to affirm to the world that the unity of the British empire is based upon and derives its strength from the most ample local autonomy and the most unbounded respect for the rights and privileges of all its subjects. It is this which has inspired our policy, and that policy we submit with confidence for the approval of parliament.

They Dye for the World.

DIAMOND DYES Are imitated but never Equalled.

For over a quarter of a century Diamond Dyes have stood the severest of tests in millions of homes, and have won a fame and popularity that has made them the world's standard home dyes.

Speculators for the sake of large profits, have endeavored to imitate the Diamond Dyes. But their productions have always proved miserable failures and deceptions. There is as much difference between the genuine Diamond Dyes and the imitations as there is between a genuine bank note and a counterfeit.

If you wish to dye successfully, profitably and well, avoid all imitation package dyes. Ask for the "Diamond" and see that you get them.

ence can give us and standing today as part of the British Empire. We have the the fact that we are part of that great empire, under whose aegis all our rights and liberties are secured from foreign aggression. What is the position of any other country in the world compared with that of Canada? Countries, with the comparative resources and population of Canada are borne down with heavy, onerous, oppressive taxation to sustain an army and a navy to protect them against foreign aggression. Under these circumstances where is the man to be found who will say that Canada, in this hour of her great prosperity, will shrink for one single moment from the duty imposed by the grandeur of our position, the strength of our position, will shrink for a single moment from standing by in the hour of her necessity, that great empire, that great country, that gives us all this and absolutely for nothing. That great navy, which is equal to the combined navies of the two other greatest maritime powers of the world; that great navy, as Mr. Chamberlain has shown, is always ready to come with speed of lightning across the Atlantic to the rescue of Canada. We are told forsooth that we are not to contribute one dollar either to the army or navy of England? This is the hour of England's need as everyone must know who has witnessed the fearful [illegible] blood and treasure which England has put to in the struggle in South Africa. Where is there a man to be found in Canada, who under these circumstances would ask that a single penny be charged against the people of the British Isles for the maintenance of the forces sent by the mother country to aid the mother country in her necessity. When certain gentlemen speak of tax without representation, do they know what they are talking about?

If the parliament of Great Britain were to impose a single dollar of taxation upon the people of Canada for the support of the great navy which gives security to our commerce, that would be taxation without representation; but to tell me that the free parliament of Canada cannot vote the money of this country to help in her hour of need the great empire of which we are proud to form a part is to tell me that which every person knows to be in variance with the facts.

And what about the constitutional question? We may be told that parliament did not vote the money. True under the constitution of England but in the constitution of Canada what utter folly and absurdity it is to talk about violation of the constitution because parliament was not assembled to vote the money expended. We have the same system as the British parliament, namely That while you must have the vote of parliament for the expenditure of all public moneys, there is the great exception, that whenever an unforeseen emergency

Everything which he gives the English speaking people he gives the Dutch speaking people. Everything she retains from the Dutch speaking people she retains from the English speaking people as well. On the other hand, in the Transvaal the Dutch government has refused to give to the English population those same rights and privileges which are willingly extended by Great Britain to the Dutch population in her own colonies. The government of the Transvaal has done this with the full and open assent of the Dutch population there and in the Orange Free State. Indeed, rather than give to the English population those equal rights which England gives to the Dutch population where she has the domination the government of the Transvaal has declared war; and rather than give up those rights and privileges of which she has been the champion all over the world, England has accepted war. Now, the issues are in the hands of that supreme power which builds up and destroys empires and nations; whose ways are inscrutable, whose judgments are ever righteous even though they bring disappointment and bitterness. Finally do we hope, fervently do we pray that this mighty scourge of war may soon pass away; that it may be [illegible] a vision which, when [illegible] shall take away from the Dutch [illegible] some of the rights which [illegible] today but which will compel them to give to others the same treatment in which they have always insisted for themselves which, when [illegible] will probably bring about [illegible] confederation of those [illegible] states, in which the rights, the privileges, the sentiments, the traditions, nay, the prejudices, of all sections of the population will be respected, [illegible] which there will be justice and freedom for all, and [illegible] equality before the

It now takes thirty-one days for mail matter to get here from Winnipeg, as against two months during the early part of the winter. The distance is a trifle less than 300 miles. And yet the people kick; but some would kick if their heads were chopped off. The first thing we know the Government will take the mail service away from us altogether. But, hold on! one thing I notice is this: if a settler cuts a few sticks of dry tamarac, behind his own line, the Government official gets on his trail, and pounces on him like a tiger. Wonder how he gets the news with such meagre mail facilities?

There was a large attendance of neighbors and friends, and all seemed deeply impressed with the gentleman's discourse. His subject was "The Theory of Evolution, as Against the Doctrine of Special Creation."

A pleasant event took place here, on Wednesday, Feb. 21st, ulto., when Miss Alice May Snider, second daughter of Mr. J. J. Snider of Vaughan, was united in marriage to Mr. Jas. Tison of this place. The ceremony was performed at the Sault Rapids, Rev. Mr. Johnson officiating.

Has Virtues That Meet the Most Obstinate Cases.

Its Virtues and Powers Act Directly on the Nerves and Blood.

The Great Spring Medicine for Every Home.

Paine's Celery Compound excels all other combinations and preparations as a spring medicine because it works directly on the shattered and unstrung nerves and impure and poisoned blood, from which so many diseases have their origin.

Paine's Celery Compound must not be confounded with deceptive, worthless and short-lived remedies such as sarsaparillas, nervines, tonics and pills that have little or no power over disease.

Paine's Celery Compound has virtues and strengthening powers that quickly brace the nerves, cleanse the blood and restore perfect circulation and digestive vigor. The special mission of Paine's Celery Compound is to accomplish what thousands of doctors fail in—the banishment of old and obstinate disorders from the system, such as kidney and liver troubles, neuralgia, rheumatism and dyspepsia. All these serious afflictions rapidly disappear under the cleansing and regulating action of Paine's Celery Compound.

If you desire renewed health and true life in the early spring season take Paine's Celery Compound. Firmly and decidly refuse the SOMETHING JUST AS GOOD that may be offered you by some dealers. Paine's Celery Compound "makes sick people well."

THE WORLD'S FINEST

New York Herald Praises the Canadian Mounted Police.

ROMANCE AND WORK SIDE BY SIDE

THE BEST EDUCATED AND WEALTHIEST POLICE FORCE IN THE WORLD.

The New York Herald says the Canadian Northwest Mounted Police are the finest corps of this class in the world. It continues:

Throughout a territory seven times greater than the whole of France law and order are maintained by a corps of only some 800 men, officially known as the Northwest Mounted Police of Canada, but familiarly as the "Riders of the Plains." The corps combines the features of a military force with those of a constabulary. Its duties are as varied as the country patrolled. Essentially the riders are soldiers, but they act as magistrates, sheriffs, detectives, town constables, customs officers, license inspectors, fire wardens, market clerks, crown timber agents, health officers, hide inspectors, game wardens, relief officers, crown prosecutors, food inspectors and mail carriers. By their discipline and proficiency, by their valor and impartiality, by their hardihood and discretion, and by their soldierly and gentlemanly bearing they have not only won the respect of all the classes they daily come in contact with, but they have spread abroad the reputation of being one of the finest forces in the world. And they live up to it. Romance and hard work ride side by side in the service. It is the stamping ground for adventurers, and the passports are intelligence, stamina and pluck.

With jaunty cap and jingling spurs a rider's saunter in the sun-baked streets of frontier towns. With white hat and bandolier they ride the plains or cattle ranges. On pack ponies they climb the mountain passes, in moccasins and buffalo coats they follow the winter trails, and in snowshoes and caribou capote they patrol the northern morasses. While working on the trail they ride enormous distances over pain and prairie.

volunteers of Canada and Great Britain, as well as former officers of the armies of England, France and Germany. About 70 per cent of the men are gentlemen by birth as well as by education. Some of them have a private income in addition to their pay. Fully 5 per cent of the saw service in the imperial army of Great Britain, some having seen service in Egypt, Africa, Afghanistan and India. The police claim to be the best educated and wealthiest police force in the world.

The force is armed with Lee-Medford and Winchester repeating carbines and Enfield revolvers. The principal stations are supplied with bronze mortars and 7 and 9 pounder field pieces. In the Yukon district they are provided with Maxim guns.

The present average of the force is—Height, 5 feet 10½ inches; weight 167 pounds; chest measurement, 38½ inches; age, 31 years.

The saddle horses used by the police are all western bred, being a cross between Indian cayuse mares and thoroughbred English sires. They average 15.2 hands in height. They have immense powers of endurance and are extremely hardy. The record ride of the corps was made by Sergeant Major Spicer, while carrying despatches during the last Riel rebellion. He rode a pony—a little over 14.1 in height—from Fort Macleod to Calgary and return, a distance of 224 miles, in two days, and, strange to say, on the morning of the third day, both horse and rider went on duty. The police horses are equipped with Mexican stock saddles and head stalls with Whitman bits, which require only a single rein. The carbine is carried balanced across the saddle and strapped to the horn.

MR. T. W. DOXTATER EXPRESSES A FATHER'S GRATITUDE

His Little Girl was Attacked With Heart Trouble and Doctors Said She Could not Recover--Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Have Made Her Sound and Lively as a Cricket

From the Sun, Belleville, Ont.

In a comfortable farm home in Sydney, near Belleville, lives Mr. T. W. Doxtater, a prosperous farmer and most respected citizen. In this pleasant home the heart of a father and mother beats with gratitude to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, because they firmly believe they saved the life of their little daughter. A reporter of the Sun having heard of the case drove out to Mr. Doxtater's for the purpose of getting at the facts, and found both father and mother of the little girl very enthusiastic in their praise of the medicine that has an

ENGLAND'S POWER.

Her Colonies a Source of Direct Power and Advantage and Profit.

GREAT BRITAIN'S FINE POSITION.

FIGURES SHOWING THE IMMENSE TRADE THAT ENGLAND DOES WITH HER COLONIES.

Although the united kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland—referred to throughout this article as England for the sake of brevity—is not the oldest of the colonial powers, being outclassed by Spain, France, Holland and Portugal. Her colonies are today by far the most important, both in regard to their extent and population, whilst the commerce of the British colonies is greater in volume than that of all the colonies of all other powers put together.

If we include India, the colonies of England cover an area of 9,000,000 square miles, and if to this we add the area of British protectorates and spheres of influence, the total area subject to British rule is 11,000,000 square miles. The smaller area that of the colonies of India alone, support a population of 367,000,000, the larger area about 120,000,000, or roughly speaking, six times the population of the United States.

As a colonial power France comes next to England, but at a great distance behind. The French colonies, including Algeria, Tunis, and all protectorates and spheres of influence, have an area of 3,500,000 square miles and a population of 53,000,000.

Next comes Germany, whose colonies and protectorates have an area of 1,000,000 square miles, and a population of 11,000,000.

The Dutch colonies have an area of 800,000 square miles and a population of 33,000,000.

As compared with these the colonies of the United States cover an area of 125,000 square miles, and have a population of 9,000,000.

A most interesting point in connection with the colonies of the European powers is whether they are a source of profit or of loss to the sovereign state. This may be looked at from two ways first, whether they are directly a source of profit or loss, or, in other

Even a brave man shudders at the thought of being torn and rended in the jaws of a ferocious tiger. In every walk of life, from that of the laborer to that of the professional man, there are thousands at the mercy of a tiger more relentless than any found in all India. That tiger is the dread disease known as consumption. It slays more men and women yearly than there are rain drops in a summer shower. It steals upon its victim with noiseless tread.

There is a sure and certain protection against this deadly disease, and a sure and speedy cure for it if it is resorted to in time. It is Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. This wonderful medicine acts directly on the lungs through the blood, tearing down old, half-dead tissues, building up new and healthy ones, driving out all impurities and disease germs and expanding the lungs and introducing life-giving oxygen into the circulation. It has wonderful curative powers and allays all inflammation of the mucous membranes of the lungs and bronchial tubes. It makes the appetite keen and hearty, the digestion and assimilation perfect, the liver active, the blood pure and rich with the life giving elements of the food, and the nerves strong and steady. It is the great blood-maker and flesh-builder. It has the most marvelous sustaining powers of any known medicine. Thousands who were upon the verge of a premature grave have testified to their recovery through its wonderful virtues. Medicines dealers sell it, and have nothing else "just as good."

When a dealer urges some substitute he's thinking of the larger profit he'll make—not of your welfare.

Dr. Pierce's book, "The Common Sense Medical Adviser," is a treasure in any family. It contains 1008 pages and 300 illustrations. A copy FREE to every person who will send to the World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y., 21 one-cent stamps, to pay cost of customs and mailing only. paper. He had previously refused to give out an interview to any of the Detroit papers, on the ground that he did not care to be written about.

Referring again to his statement as to England's attitude during the Spanish war, the admiral continued:

"We can't prove it in black and white, but we know as well as we can know anything that those three ambassadors from Austria, Germany and France, who called on England, had for their object the beginning of a war on this country, had England but said the word. Then, too, we know that when Von Diedrichs was annoying Dewey at Manila, Dewey said to one of the German Admiral's staff: 'Tell Von Diedrichs if he wants war he can have it, and if he wants to know what England's attitude will be he can find out in five minutes.' This extract, by strong hint was allowed to pass unchecked. Soon afterward Von Diedrichs received an urgent call to the coast of China.

They follow the mountain trails, by railroad train or steamboat they go from town to village. They follow the shores of lake and river. They penetrate snow bounded forests, and in lake possible some new found Eldorado they cut their way through an unexplored wilderness. Like the meshes of a gigantic net they patrol the wilds that cover a country that measures a thousand miles from east to west, and two thousand miles from north to south. In fact one patrol dispatched from Fort Saskatchewan in Alberta, to Fort Resolution, on Great Slave lake, then to Fort Simpson on the Mackenzie River, and return via Lesser Slave lake, covers a distance of 2,172 miles. The patrolling party spends the greater part of the distance on snowshoes and covers the remainder in canoe and paddle. To the soldier of the Queen this duty is regarded as a special duty, for instance of an officer who in the course of his regular duties as assistant commissioner during but a few years travelled a total distance of 13,151 miles, [illegible] miles of which he rode on horseback by avoiding [illegible] miles with [illegible] 200 miles on snowshoes, by [illegible] I system of patrolling patrol [illegible] every settler in the North [illegible] inspection is [illegible] by visits by the police.

A reporter of the Sun having heard of the case drove out to Mr. Dextater's for the purpose of getting at the facts, and found both father and mother of the little girl very enthusiastic in their praise of the medicine that has unquestionably done so much to relieve suffering in this country. Said Mr. Dextater: "Yes, we have good reason for Praising Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. I think they are worth ten times their weight in gold. When our little daughter Clara was about eight years old she was stricken with what the doctors said was heart trouble. Up to that time she had been a strong healthy child. The first symptoms shown were fainting spells, and these would attack her without a moment's warning. We consulted a doctor, under whose care she was for a time, but the treatment did her no good—in fact she was growing worse. Then we called in another doctor and he frankly told us that he could hold out but little hope of her recovery. By this time she was confined to bed, and for three months was helpless as an infant. In some of the fainting spells she was attacked with convulsions. Her appetite so fled entirely gone and she was reduced to a living skeleton. At this time I read particulars of a cure through the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, which gave me hope, and I determined that our little girl should try them. I first got one box, and when they were used she seemed brighter. Taking five more boxes and by the time she had finished them she was as sound as [illegible] as you could find in the neighborhood, bright and lively as a [illegible]. She has been going to school for the past eighteen months, and [illegible] shown absolutely no symptoms of [illegible] trouble. I attribute her cure entirely to the use of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and if any one doubts the truth of this statement you can refer them either to myself or my wife."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are just as valuable in the case of children as with adults, and pale little ones would soon thrive and grow fat under this treatment, which has no equal for building up the blood and giving renewed strength to brain, body and nerves.

Sold by all dealers or sent postpaid at 50c a box or six boxes for $2.50, by addressing the Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont. Do not be persuaded to try something else said to be "just as good."

"Did you tell that young man not to call here any more?" asked Mabel's father severely.

"No, no."

"Why not?"

"I didn't think it was necessary. I don't see how he could call any more. He calls seven times a week."

As compared with these the colonies of the United States cover an area of 125,000 square miles, and have a population of 9,000,000.

A most interesting point in connection with the colonies of the European powers is whether they are a source of profit or of loss to the sovereign state. This may be looked at in two ways: First, whether they are directly a source of profit, or loss, or, in other words, whether they pay revenue into the treasury of the sovereign state or are a cause of actual expense to the mother country; second, whether the home country succeeds in securing such a proportion of trade from their colonies as to amount to a real national advantage.

In regard to this point we may compare the colonies of England, France and Germany. The British colonies receive nothing from the imperial treasury and contribute nothing to it. This does not, of course, imply that colonies being valued at $2,270,000,000, in other words, she receives more than one-fifth of her imports from her colonies. In 1895 France imported from her colonies goods to the value of $70,000,000. Other total imports being valued at $750,000,000. That is to say, she received less than one-tenth of her imports from her colonies. Germany received in 1895 imports from her colonies to the value of $2,000,000, her total imports being worth $1,000,000,000. That is, she received about one-five-hundredth part of her imports from her colonies.

Turning now to exports, we find that in 1897 England exported British and Irish produce to the total value of $1,170,000,000, of which $400,000,000 worth went to the British colonies—roughly one-third of her total exports. In 1895 the value of exports of French merchandise amounted to $650,000,000, of which $58,000,000, or one-tenth, went to the French colonies. Germany exported in 1895 home merchandise to the value of $700,000,000, of which $2,000,000 worth, or one-three-hundred-and-fifth-th part went to the German colonies.

If we consider these figures for a moment we shall perceive several curious facts. England exported to the British colonies goods to a value six times as great as that of the exports from France and Germany to their respective colonies, and she also imported from her colonies six times more goods than France an Germany put together imported from her colonies.

Toronto Star: Even the splendid tribute which Lord Roberts paid to the Canadian regiment does not seem to have told the full story of what they did, for later London despatches say that when Cronje surrendered the Canadians were engaged in a hand to hand fight with the Boers in their trenches. We must not, however, be unjust in our praise of our own men. There is always a great rivalry among the various British regiments for the honor of leading a charge, and when the full details are furnished, we may learn that the Canadians were allowed to lead the charge not only because they had already shown their quality, but because their selection did not excite that jealousy among the other regiments that might have manifested itself if one British regiment had been preferred above another. We say this not to detract from the splendid performance of the Canadian regiment, but, because we believe that time will show that this is the only just view to take of the affair. Our men were given the perilous honor they craved, and the great point—the cause for unbounded pride—is not that they were given it, but that they made such use of it that today the story of what they did is the talk of the whole empire, and the unlooking nations that thought the assistance of the colonies was purely sentimental in its effects are marking down memoranda to the effect that fighting men can be had in the British colonies—men who, in the changed conditions under which war is now, and will hereafter be, waged, are hard to equal and impossible to beat.

Lacrosse Grounds Wanted.

To the Editor of The Miner:

Dear Sir,—Now that the hockey season is nearly over and the lacrosse season approaching us, I think something ought to be done towards securing grounds for our boys to play on. The boys are beginning already to talk of re-organizing, but cannot do so, until they first find out if they are going to have grounds this year. The writer has been often asked by the boys who have lacrosse at heart, if there is going to be a team this year? To this question I could only reply, providing we get grounds. The council should take this matter in hand at an early date, and if they think the town cannot afford to provide grounds, then why not grant a small sum towards it, and by so doing perhaps other prominent citizens of our town will fall in line. There is splendid material here for a good team, with lots of young blood to choose from. It seems a pity that a move in this direction has not been made to encourage the game in Rat Portage. There being no hockey in summer, what are our boys to indulge in for exercise? Grounds can be got and fitted up at a reasonable figure, and I think, at least, the council ought to take a step to further the interest of lacrosse here. Now let us see if something can't be done immediately in this matter. All lovers of lacrosse should put their shoulders to the wheel and push this matter ahead as soon as possible. Nearly all of our team of 1898 are still living in Rat Portage and are anxious to have an opportunity to play and to assist in the younger boys of the town the game, so that when they retire, there will be young players to take their place. So with good grounds I am sure Rat Portage could easily capture the Western Canada Lacrosse Championship trophy. Thanking you for your valuable space I occupy, I remain who urge others to make hay while the sun shines, and last but not least, to put by a little for a rainy day, are wisdom itself. Though some trades have bettered themselves by the war, jewelers and diamond setters are unfortunately not included in this category: hence why the pinch is so severely felt in Birmingham, where all sorts of so called jewelry is manufactured. The principal sufferers, however, are dealers in gold and diamonds. The relief of Kimberley will very soon set them right. Still, demands for jewellery are very limited owing to the fact that the wealthiest in the land have been exemplary in their munificent contributions to the soldiers', widows' and orphans' funds; besides, nobility very wisely abstains from giving and attending balls and parties, which explains why so little jewellery is being purchased just now.

OUR LONDON LETTER.

An elephant hunt is indeed a novelty in London. The majority of Londoners residing in the southeastern suburbs of the metropolis have had good reason to look scared all the week. Two formidable animals belonging to Lord Sanger's circus, and quartered in the Crystal Palace, suddenly went mad and broke loose. Their keeper was the first victim, the biggest of the two elephants, Charlie, trampled him to death, after which he set to exploring the inside of the Palace, smashing everything in his way. After doing considerable damage and sending visitors flying in all directions he was captured and shot. His companion, Archie, preferred taking at once to the open the better to air his deranged mental faculties. A general hunt was the order of the day. After exploring the country for many miles around he was caught and made safe. The most remarkable thing about Archie was that though he traversed a distance of nearly 20 miles within a short time he was not injured before. The number of gardens, brick walls, trees, etc., wrecked by the runaway is considerable. Of the two Charlie was the most dangerous; he had been 10 years in the possession of his master. The sudden outbreak of his madness is unaccountable. Much difficulty was experienced in killing him; a quarter of a pound of poison was given him, which had no effect beyond dazing him. Several hours elapsed before crackshots returned from the city armed with proper elephant guns and ammunition. The coup de grace was rapidly administered with good effect. Londoners are now able to breathe more freely knowing that there is no further cause for alarm.

NOTICE is hereby given pursuant to the Revised Statutes of Ontario, 1897, cap. 129, that all creditors and others having claims against the estate of the said Murdock Murchison who died on or about the 16th day of December, A.D. 1899, are required on or before the 9th day of April, A.D. 1900, to send by post prepaid or deliver to Allan McLennan, of the Town of Rat Portage, in the District of Rainy River, Solicitor for William Robertson, Executor of the last will and testament of the said deceased, their christian and surnames, addresses and descriptions, the full particulars of their claims, a statement of their accounts and the nature of Ontario Gold Fields.

Homestake Gold Mining Co. of Ontario, Limited. . .

is organized under the laws of the State of Minnesota

Capital Stock $1,250,000

divided into 1,250,000 shares of $1.00 each fully paid and non-assessable.

750,000 Shares in the Treasury.

The head office is in St. Paul, Minn., and the board of directors are well known St. Paul and Rat Portage, Ont., men. The secretary and treasurer are placed under proper bonds, which are to be increased as the necessity requires, all under the management of the board of directors.

This Company owns two rich mineral claims in the Lake of the Woods country, Ontario, amounting to over 100 acres. The vein is conceeded to be the largest body of free-milling ore ever discovered in any land. Its width is from 400 to 600 feet and its length over one mile.

The value of this great deposit is from $7.50 to $8.95 per ton while the cost of treatment, including mining, should not exceed $1.50 per ton, as we are able to simply quarry it out.

The great Homestake of South Dakota, with values never exceeding $5.00 per ton, has paid $8,008,750 in dividends. We will do the same.

The original owners of this great property take stock in the Company for the property, and their shares when issued are to be placed in the hands of a reliable trust company, to be held by such trust company until this Company has secured a mining and milling plant of 250 tons daily capacity.

A HUNDRED STAMP MILL on this great deposit will earn from 25 to 40 per cent. annually on the par value of the shares, which means from 200 to 400 per cent. to the investor who buys competent engineers in the expenditure of our funds.

We can quarry out 10,000 tons of this ore and have it treated at the public reduction works as soon as navigation opens, and by this means we can earn enough to buy our own mill, and for this purpose we are now selling ONE HUNDRED THOUSAND SHARES of treasury stock at ten cents per share cash or on the following terms: Two cents per share cash down and 1 cent per share per month until paid. This offer subject to advance without notice.

No certificates will be issued for a less amount than 500 shares.

We do not expect to be very long in disposing of this issue owing to the very low price at which it is selling. Don't wait too long but send in your order at once if you want any of these shares. If you have any money to invest place it with home people and buy SHARES that entitles you to an interest in the property owned by a good, reliable company.

Our shares are non-assessable and every share entitles the holder to an interest in the property.

The board of directors who manage the affairs of this Company are as follows:

Cyrus Wellington, Ronald Stewart, John W. Nelson, W. H. Hill, James A. Kelly, Fred J. Bowman, N. C. Westerfield, C. D. Pruden and T. E. Birbeck.

C. D. Pruden, president; Fred J. Bowman, Secretary, and Ronald Stewart, Treasurer. Don't impossible to beat.

OUR INDUSTRIES.

Winnipeg Commercial: Canada is coming to the front as a producer of paper. English capital is now turning its attention to this promising industry and we learn every little while of some deal involving an addition to the paper producing plants of the Dominion. The latest is a sale of part of a concession from the Ontario government held by the Imperial Paper Company at Sturgeon Falls for three-quarters of a million dollars to the London Daily Chronicle owners. This means that a mill will be erected in the near future under the terms of agreement with the Ontario government for the manufacture of newspaper. Other leading dailies contemplate moves of the same sort.

Waterworks.

To the Editor of The Miner:

Sir,—As a ratepayer I am under the impression that any branch of the commercial life the town accepts to handle, should receive that care and attention, and be as well looked after as a private enterprise? If not, it is with regret that many who favor municipal management of public utilities find that the benefits that should accrue are lost through poor management or neglect of the office. This state of affairs in Rat Portage may be partially due to the action of the council in not fixing some remuneration for the Commissioners which they certainly should have done and which the Commissioners have every right to expect, but notwithstanding this neglect on the part of the town council, the honors should not be so anxiously desired by the present occupant if they are not willing to attend and devote a reasonable portion of time to the duties, under any circumstances. There are few business houses paying as high office salary as the Commissioners, for considering that for months past there was little or no work to be done and what little there is should be attended to by one Commissioner, or have the duties added to those of the town clerk. I submit that it is a well known fact that the water branch has not been run on a paying basis for years, then why not curtail this expenditure. Another piece of unnecessary expense due to neglect or ignorance of the Commissioners is in the style of sidewalk valve adopted and tube leading thereto, which it has been demonstrated is not a proper kind and with the result that every house connection in

Letter From the Front.

Following is a letter written to F. Davis, of the Hilliard House, by his brother at the front in South Africa, who was reported killed in the battle of Belmont, but who has since been heard from, dated Jan. 6:

Dear Frank,—I drop you a line hoping it will find you in good health. Am very pleased to be able to say that as far as health is concerned I am all piff, but it is as the saying is, in the midst of life we are in death. I have rubbed through three engagements alright, and hope to get through the rest. We have a blockade. The Boers are holding a front of 10 miles, and do you know it takes a lot to shift them.

England has got a hard nut to crack; much harder than she expected, and I am afraid her teeth will be good and sore before she has cracked it. Dear Frank, they have got all the latest patent quick firing guns. There are as many German soldiers as Boers, and are led by English generals supposed to be retired gentlemen in South Africa for the benefit of their health. We have been doing some work at Belmont. It was this day the Old Ribs as we are called, lost about 60 killed and wounded. We started coming daylight when we charged in energy and had the good luck to drive them out on his knees to say his prayers. I gave him a dig in the ribs and we were in for a row.

Yours truly,

A. DAVIS.

A Problem.

Editor Rat Portage Miner:

In answer to the following problem taken from the News, I wish to suggest another: "If General Roberts, with 75,000 men and 50 machine guns, occupied ten days in enforcing the surrender of Cronje and 4,000 or 4,000 Boers, how long will it be before 100,000 Boers are licked to a finish?" Rat Portage News.

If 100,000 Boers after 15 years preparation and with the pick of the artillery world could not take any one of three little garrisons in four months. How long will it be before the Fenian pro Boer wishes are realized?

Rat Portage Steam Laundry.

This concern has changed hands, and is now under new management, Mr. R. H. Shoemaker, of Virden, manager, and Mr. E. L. Thorburn, of Winnipeg, being the new proprietors. The laundry has been fitted up to date machinery added, and is now ready to laundry all styles of articles in a first-class manner. Those who patronize the new firm may rely on good work, and the proprietors may look forward to a large trade, as a laundry of this description has been much needed here in the past.

WINNIPEGS DEFEATED.

The Prairie City Team Defeated by Five Gapes.

Our hockey people were pleased Saturday night at seeing our Thistles defeat the Winnipegs, but some of them say they have seen better hockey. Still the game was quite lively. The Winnipeg boys have some excuse in the fact as they said that they had not played together before and consequently were unable to get the combination work up that is usual with the Winnipeg team. However, they put up a good game and would have gained an inch had our boys been a little less capable. The home team was also a little weaker than usual. Bell-Faille had been sick and was advised by the doctor not to play. Notwithstanding this, however, Tough played a good game. Just before the match McMunsie was struck on the eye with the puck and lost a great deal of blood which weakened him considerably. The game began at 9.30, the teams being as follows:

W.		Thistles
Fr.	Goal	Dulmage
Cole	Point	S. Johns
Wood	Cover	Bellefaille
Tough	Forwards	McGinn
Holida		Frazer
Purdon		Hooper
Patterson		Phillips

The game started briskly, and both sides were on the point of scoring several times. Finally Bellefaille checked Winnipeg forward severely and they left the ice. All the Rat Portage men stood to see the mix-up and while they were looking a Winnipeg forward got the puck through for a goal. Time on. Then Rat Portage began to pick up and play harder. Hooper got the puck and the puck and Keewatin Didn't Win.

Wednesday night a number of Rat Portage people went to Keewatin to play hockey with the representatives of that town on their own ice. The game was exciting and at times the applause for the remarkable playing was so deafening that some feared they would lose their hearing. The size of the rink would admit of playing but six men a side. The line up was as follows:

Rat Portage.		Keewatin.
W. Johnson	Goal	Donald
Pender	Point	Eshlin
W. Johnson	Cover	Lasul
Wood	Forwards	Sutherland
Heys		Fischer
Johnson		McPherson

The games were decidedly in favor of the young flour millers in the first half, and closed with the score 5 to 1 in their favor. In the second half our invincible drug aggregation took a quinine and administered a dose of morphia to the Keewatins, so that when "time" was called the score was 6-6.

Jas. Frazer was referee, and he did it beautifully. J. Wood was umpire for Rat Portage and W. Armstrong counted pucks for Keewatin.

After the match the boys were taken to Moore's restaurant and provided with a sumptuous repast in the line of an oyster supper. W. Gilchrist was master of ceremonies and a very good toast list was rendered.

The evening was perfect for drinking, and all present report a most happy time.

CURLING.

The Ice Sweepers Still Busy Cleaning the Frigidity.

Our curlers are still on the rampage, and now that the great event of the season, the inter-rink competition is over the players are getting to work on the Patron, Patroness and Smith-Fischel competition is very keen.

In the Patron's, Clark knocked out Gaudaur, and Langford's Big Four knocked out Clark's Family Compact.

In the Green Curlers' competition for the Neads cup Cecil Clark got into the finals by defeating Schwartz. Al. Rose became defeated at the hands of Major Fricker. The major plays quite steady game, you know, and Al. rose to the occasion—nit.

Campbell's Veteran Wranglers defeated Gaudaur's Championship Heroes in the Smith-Fischel, and rather rubbed it in. Campbell has to turn his smile sideways to get it out of doors. Edmison says he's a hoodoo.

Gaudaur and Clark say they never did care much for smoking anyway, and if they need a smoke they can purchase one at regulation rates.

Walsh said he would rather find a new gold mine than lose that match.

The old timers of the club have challenged three rinks of the later comers for a game. The stake played for is two barrels of flour for the hospital. A meeting has been arranged for Monday night to set a date for the game and settle incidentals.

In the Patroness, Cameron beat Clark, and Gaudaur beat Kennedy.

People look round at a nice head of hair on the street, so rare has that beautiful ornament become at the present day. Why is this? It certainly is not the fault of LUBY'S Parisian Hair Renewer, which is an almost infallible remedy against premature grey hair. Only 50 cents a bottle.

Capt. Emmons Dead.

A cable from Toronto announced the death of Capt. Jno. Emmons died this morning in that city. His death was due to Bright's disease. Capt. Emmons had been unwell for about a year and took a trip to Bermuda to improve his health. Finding himself growing worse he returned to Toronto to the home of his son, where he remained till he succumbed to his malady. He has been quite low for a couple of weeks and his end was expected hourly.

There is a large family of five daughters and four sons to mourn this loss. Mrs. Emmons and daughter Emma are in Toronto. It has not yet been $3,000,000 from Quebec, and $8,000,000 from Novia Scotia, or nearly $50,000,000, as compared with $38,000,000 last year.

Hooper was struck by the puck and laid up for few minutes, but he soon reappeared and the game started afresh. Frazer shot the second in 3 minutes and faster 5 minutes he managed to get another. Then Mundie took a bad tumble and was carried off the ice. He was hurt so severely that he could not play any more, so as the Winnipegs had no spare man McGimsie was taken off and six men aside were played. In a half minute after the faceoff Frazer shot a goal and he got two more in this half, making the score standing at the half 5-1 for Rat Portage.

A. McDonald Co. vs. Cameron & Heap.

Wednesday night a number of people gathered at Victoria rink to see the contest between the hockey teams of the A. McDonald Co. and Cameron & Heap. The game waxed furious from the start, and the Macs seemed to have everything their own way in the first half, as it closed with the score 5-1 in their favor. However in the second half the gentlemen from the lake front took a pair of braces and removed the chilliness from the game, winding up with a score of 6-5 in favor of Cameron & Heap. The line-up was as follows:

A. McDonald Co.		Cameron & Heap.

Tommy Hanson put up a good game. The goalkeepers both played well. The School's forward line did some pretty combination but Guthrie stopped such things very well. In the first half the Schools closed with the score 3-2 in their favor. In the second half the Wanderers pulled up even and the tie was not played off.

There is a large family of five daughters and four sons to mourn his loss. Mrs. Emmons and daughter Emma are in Toronto. It has not yet been decided where the funeral will take place, although it is likely that it will be in Toronto.

The captain was 56 years of age and was well known in this part of Ontario. He came here in 1881 and has lived here since. He was chief of provincial police and was interested in mining. He was a retired sea-captain and at one time was a keeper in the Central prison, Toronto.

The many friends of Captain Emmons in Rat Portage and the district will regret his death. He was exceedingly popular, one of those men who need no effort to win their way into the hearts of the people. He was kind, gentlemanly and honest, and in the performance of his duties was firm yet considerate. His family has the sincere sympathy of a wide acquaintanceship.

The women's branch of the above society opened on Monday night in the Oddfellows' hall, with 30 members, and judging by the material comprising the charter members, there is every prospect of a brilliant future for this branch of the order. The officers for the current term are:

Chief Companion—Mrs. Baker.
Past C. C.—Mrs. Crawford.
Sub. C. C.—Mrs. Musk.
Secretary—Miss McBride.
Treasurer—Mrs. Rice.
Right guide—Mrs. Horner.
Left guide—[illegible]
Inner guard—Mrs. Sims.
Outer guard—[illegible]
Pianist—Miss Beaudro.

The circle will be known as the Star of the West, and will meet on the 2nd and 4th Monday. The A.O.F. is making rapid progress and there is talk of opening up a juvenile court in Rat Portage.

CANADIAN MINING.

Annual Meeting of The Institute Reports of The Secretary.

Montreal, March 8.—The Canadian Mining Institute was convened in annual session yesterday morning under the presidency of Geo. E. Drummond. The attendance was small. Before the meeting adjourned the report of Secretary B. T. Bell, was read and adopted. The sum of $250 was voted to the Canadian Patriotic Fund and certain amendments, affecting membership of the organization were introduced.

The secretary also read detailed reports from the various provinces which in substance showed that the total mineral production for this year would be approximately $18,000,000 from Yukon; $12,000,000 from British Columbia; $25,000,000 from Ontario;

W. Boat, on Lake of Woods. State lowest cash price, full particulars of Boat, Boiler, Engine, speed and fuel consumed per hour while working at full capacity. Address Crotty & Cross, Winnipeg, Man.

LIEUTEN'T ROBERTS

How "Bob's" Gallant Son Won the Victoria Cross

AT THE BATTLE OF COLENSO, S. A.

ONE OF THE MOST GALLANT DEEDS PERFORMED DURING THE PRESENT WAR.

In describing the heroic defence of the guns at the battle of Colenso, Mr. Bennet Burleigh, the correspondent of the Daily Telegraph, wrote: "By the light of all my experience in war, these gunners of ours are men who deserve monuments over their graves and even Victoria Crosses in their coffins." It is curious to notice how the loss of the guns of the 11th and 66th Batteries—in itself a disaster, has become a glorious incident, not only from the brave way in which the gunners stood to their guns to the very last, but from the two gallant attempts to rescue them that were made. "The detachment serving the guns had," writes Sir Redvers Buller, "all been killed, wounded or driven from the guns by the enemy's infantry fire at close range, and the guns were deserted. About 500 yards from the guns was a donga, in which some of the few horses and drivers left alive were sheltered. The intervening space was swept with shell and rifle fire. Capt. Congreve, Rifle Brigade, who was in the donga, assisted to hook a team into a limber, went out and assisted to limber up a gun; being wounded he took shelter, but, seeing Lieutenant Roberts fall badly wounded, he went again and brought him in. Some idea of the nature of the fire may be gathered from the fact that Captain Congreve was shot through the leg, through the toe of his boot, grazed on the elbow and shoulder, and his horse shot in three places. Lieutenant the Hon F. H. S. Roberts, King's Royal Rifles, assisted Captain Congreve. He was wounded in three places. Corporal Nurse, Royal Field Artillery, 66th Battery, also assisted. I recommend the above three for the Victoria Cross. . . . . Shortly afterwards, Captain H. E. Reed, 7th Battery, Royal Field Artillery, who had heard of the difficulty, brought down three teams from his battery to see if he could be of any use. He was wounded, as were five of the thirteen men who rode with him;

EATING TOO MUCH.

The Habit Leads Not Only to Disease, but to Death.

Dr. Cyrus Edson of New York says: If it were not for the practice of overeating there would be, broadly speaking, nothing for doctors to do, for overeating leads not only to disease, but to death. There is hardly a day in the year that I do not learn of a death traceable to this cause.

Now, what should be done to remedy this condition? It is well, of course, in the first place to avoid banquets and too frequent dining out, a practice which so often produces fatal results, yet it is, after all, only about 1 per cent of the population which suffers from banquets. To the great mass of the people that daily poisons itself through ignorance and greediness I would say, Study your own system.

Experiment until you discover the minimum of food upon which you can live and work. This will depend upon the amount of exercise you take. Do not crowd up that misunderstood engine, your body, with fuel which it cannot properly consume and which could only serve to produce energy which you have no opportunity to expend. It is of course a truism that a man physically active requires more food than one who, for instance, sits at a desk all day. When you have discovered the amount of nourishment you literally need to supply you with working energy, with a little margin for reserve, do not exceed it. Otherwise the unassimilated food will poison your system with a poison which will ultimately result in the particular form of disease to which your individual constitution renders you most susceptible.

Avoid alcohol. This statement may be accepted literally. The human system requires no alcohol. In this case abstinence is better than temperance.

Avoid too much meat. The average man sins more often here than in any other direction. On the other hand, I would not commend absolute vegetarianism, admirable though its theory is in many respects. Though man was originally a frugivorous, if not grain frugivorous animal he has then for so many centuries accustomed himself to the practice of meat eating that he could not forswear it suddenly without injury to himself. Therefore it is best to eat a moderate amount of well cooked meat once a day.

In regard to the proportion of fruits, vegetables, fats, sweets and so forth which each person can afford to take into his system, that must be scientifically determined in each instance. No general rule may be laid down. It may be added, however, that as mankind is roughly divisible into two temperaments, the rheumatic and the scrofulous, or consumptive, the former class should preserve the greater abstinence, and the latter may the more safely indulge themselves in food.

Be short, eat as little as other then as much as you can.

HE TURNED ALL COLORS.

Fate of a Russian Officer Who Loved a Dyer's Daughter.

Let all subalterns be warned by the misfortunes which befell a young Russian lieutenant named [illegible], a young woman, the daughter of a dyer, and insuitable to the ambitious [illegible] which the young officer paid her. Her father proposed for a son-in-law one of his own class, forbade his daughter having anything to do with the young officer and warned him off the premises. Two severe cases that were completely cured by the Great Blood Purifier and Healer,

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

Suffered 11 Years. For over eleven years I suffered with Dyspepsia and tried everything I could think of, but was unable to get relief until I took Burdock Blood Bitters. I had only taken one bottle when I commenced to feel better, and after taking five or six bottles was entirely well, and have remained so ever since, and feel as though B.B.B. had saved my life.—Mrs. T. G. Boyce, Stanhope, P.Q.

Covered With Sores. My little boy, aged 10 years, was a complete mass of sores, caused, the doctor said, by bad blood. His head and body were entirely covered with sores, and we could find no cure. Finally I got a bottle of Burdock Blood Bitters, and before one-half the bottle was gone he began to improve and by the time it was finished there was not a sore on him.

I used the B.B.B. as a wash as well as internally, and it seemed to give great relief as soon as it was put on.—Mrs. Philip Mitchell, St. Mary's, Ont.

ONE OF EUGENE FIELD'S PRANKS.

His Story of the Tragic Death of Kate Field's Spanish Lover.

[illegible] Kohlsaat related a funny story of a practical joke played on Eugene Field. Mr. Kohlsaat said: "Miss Kate Field took in [illegible] Eugene Field, and how vexed she would be at the pranks he was continually playing upon her.

"But the story that broke Kate Field's heart was written by Gene when she was in Spain writing up the Spanish in 1895. It was one of the most ingenious and sensational fakes ever sprung on the public," said Mr. Kohlsaat.

"The story purported to be a special from Madrid. It seemed that the [illegible] had been accepted, and the thrilling epi-

RETRIBUTION.

He saved a little day by day,
Withheld from something that he craved.
"The dollars grow," he used to say,
"From extra pennies that are saved."

His pile of savings grew and grew,
Each day he hoarded more and more;
Each night he ran his fingers through
And gloated o'er his golden store.

And as his wealth increased his heart
Shrank, hardened, shriveled and decayed.
He cheated, gouged and played the part
That many another fool has played.

He rose to power through his wealth;
He crushed those who were in the way;
He gained a fortune, lost his health
And miserably died one day.

Then came his drunken cousin, who
Had thrashed him when the two were boys.
His savings and his stealings, too,
One whom he hated now enjoys.

SCAVENGER OF THE VELDT

The Aasvogel, Which Keeps the Wide Plains Clean.

Although the term "vulture" has been used for all time as a term of the vilest opprobrium, no one who knows the bird, its appearance and its habits could doubt for a moment that it expresses a depth of degradation which is barely conceivable.

And yet the vulture does a great deal of good in acting as the scavenger of the veldt. But for his quick eye, carrion taste and love of dead meat the disease germs in the carcasses of dead oxen would be far more prolific and dangerous.

Throughout South Africa is found the aasvogel. Go anywhere you like on the veldt, and sooner or later—and in all probability the former—you will find the remains of his ghastly meal. There are hundreds of thousands of oxen used in the transport and trekking service. Many of them die from exhaustion, want of water or cruelty from their Boer masters. Or they may eat of the poisonous tulp, a bulbous plant growing in marshy places.

A kurneyor, or teamster, soon knows if any one or more of his oxen have been eating tulp. The neck of the ox swells, his eyes close up, he gives short, sharp coughs, and his case is generally hopeless. Sometimes, however, he may be saved, and this by a peculiar homeopathic sort of remedy. If the bulb of the tulp plant is crushed into pulp, mashed with hot water and forced boiling hot down the throat of the ox he may recover.

The quickness of the eye of the aasvogel is simply astounding. An ox falls out of the team, evidently ill. He is out spanned from his yoke fellow, and he goes down to the spruit, or stream. The sky [illegible] away to the horizon on all sides [illegible] distance. Hardly has the ox died, but the body of the poor ox [illegible] far, far away up [illegible] black dots. [illegible]

To Enjoy.... A Good Dinner

Nurse, Royal Field Artillery, 6th Battery, also assisted. I recommend the above three for the Victoria Cross. . . . . Shortly afterwards Captain H. L. Reed, 7th Battery, Royal Field Artillery, who had heard of the difficulty, brought down three teams from his battery to see if he could be of any use. He was wounded, as were five of the thirteen men who rode with him: one was killed, his body was found on the field, and thirteen (out of the twenty-one) horses were killed before he got half way to the guns, and he was obliged to retire. I recommend Captain Reed for the Victoria Cross."

In an interesting letter Captain Congreve himself writes: "I have never seen, even at field firing, the bullets fly thicker. All one could see were little tufts of dust all over the ground, a whistling noise, 'phut' where they hit, and an increasing battle of musketry somewhere in front. My first bullet went through my left sleeve, and just inside the joint of my elbow-pad. Next a clod of earth caught me a smack on the other arm, then my horse got one then my right leg got one and my horse another. That finished us, for he plunged, and I fell about a hundred yards short of the guns, we were going to. A little Indian was lying, and just as I tobogged down, I had not been in a minute before my shoulder bullet, hit the toe of my boot, went into the web, travelled up and came out at the top, two inches from the end of the toe. It did not even scratch me. But I shifted my quarters pretty quick. About H[illegible] the fire slackened and I went [illegible] poor Roberts badly wounded [illegible] with help to him into the [illegible]. There we lay from 11 to 1.30, no water, not a breath of air, no particle of shade, and a thirst which I have never felt better in India."

Facts is graphically and briefly recorded one of the most gallant deeds performed in the war. The story of the defence of the guns and of the two gallant attempts to recover them, certainly mitigate the sense of disappointment and distress felt in this country at the disaster. At the same time everyone has felt the keenest sympathy with Lord and Lady Roberts at the loss of their gallant son, who died from the effects of his wounds. Lieutenant Roberts did fair to emulate his gallant father, who won the V. C. in the Indian Mutiny. It is sad to think of a young life full of promise thus lost, but we must remember that the V.C. is never given except in cases where the candidate has risked his life. If there can be a solace for the loss of an only son, Lord Roberts must find comfort in the manner death his son died.

The Worst of All.

Noddy—There are times when a man has to lie to his wife.

Todd—And that isn't the worst of it.

"What is?"

"There are times when he has to tell the truth."

During the summer of 1839 the Valley Forge, the first boat of iron that navigated the western rivers, was launched at Pittsburg.

The Duke of Wellington, six months after the battle of Waterloo, was created a marshal of France.

which red and yellow, Spain's colors, largely predominated. She was to attend the bullfight with her lover. The arrival of Mataro and his ducal equipage, splendid attire and ceremonious attentions to his fiancee were elaborately set forth. Miss Field in her gorgeous robes accompanied the duke to the Plaza del Toros.

"Arrived at the plaza, the duke found the assemblage so large that he would not deign to mingle with the crowd that poured in at the main entrance; but bribed those in charge of the private to let him pass through with his bride to be.

"It was an innovation that took the people by storm. The fickle courtier courting the lovely girl, the unused glitter and air of his gilded trappings and his stalwart dagoes enraptured the great multitude that sat thick on tier about the vast amphitheater.

"In this imposing manner the duke, his mamacita and his retinue traversed the entire diameter of the arena. The first box had not yet been brought in, and Miss Field and the duke were for the time being the whole attraction.

"Just as the duke made ready to assist his lady over the barricade a wild cry rang out from the throng, a shout of terror, not of applause. Through some mistake a bull had been admitted to the arena too soon and glimpsing Miss Field's dress, rushed for her in headlong rage.

"Miss Field shrieked and fainted with terror, but the strong arms of the duke lifted her quickly over the barrier where a dozen hands stood ready to receive her. Her flight frightened her lover had no time to save himself, and then at instant the horns of the infuriated bull were buried in his vitals."

"Well," said Mr. Kobbant, "this story was copied everywhere, and the sympathy of the world went out to the lovely American who had lost her lover in this tragic manner."

"Only the other day," said Miss Field to me a short time before her death, "a young lady came to me and said, 'Oh, Miss Field, I have often longed to meet you and tell you how deeply I sympathize with you in the loss of your lover over in Spain, that splendid fellow who'— And she was much frozen with astonishment when I cut her off and said, 'Rats!'"—Denver Post.

Whittier's Predicament.

Whittier held "Gail Hamilton" (Abigail Dodge) in the highest esteem, and the letters that passed between them are really most delightful. Here is one of the series in "The Ladies' Home Journal" that is truly characteristic of Whittier. It was written in 1866:

"I must tell thee something droll. Last week the Amesbury veterans from New Hampshire and a Massachusetts company, with military bands, came and paraded before our house, and Governor Smith of New Hampshire and one or two officers called on me. When they left and I stepped out to see them civilly off, the men in ranks got up a grand military salute, with music and three cheers to wind up with! Was ever a Quaker in such a predicament? I did, I fear, somewhat compromise myself by lifting, almost involuntarily, my hand to my hat. But I resisted the temptation and only pulled my hat lower down over my brows by way of testimony."

He Set at Eight.

He was only a little boy, and this was his first diary. It had been given him as a birthday present and was bound in a red cover, with a highly colored picture adorning the front.

He meant to begin well and early, so he carefully wrote, "Got up at 7." Then, according to instructions, he took it to his governess for approval.

That highly proper lady frowned: "Got up!" she said; "get up! You careless boy! Does the sun get up? No, it rises."

Very meekly she scratched out the barbarous words and made him write, "Rose at 7." This settled Master Tom; no more mistakes of this kind for him again!

So on retiring for the night he wrote, with the air of a man who knew his business well, "Set at 8."

Art Treasures in Japan.

The Japanese idea in regard to art treasures is quite different from the American idea as seen in the home. The American method is to keep all the good pictures or beautiful bronzes or unique vases in evidence all the time. The Japanese way is to store the artistic belongings, bringing different ones to light for a time, and thereby avoiding the too abundant appearance that is often the rule here.—New York Sun.

Outlived the Romance.

JAFFAR.

Jaffar, the Barmecide, the good vizier.
The poor man's hope, the friend without a peer—
Jaffar was dead, slain by a doom unjust.
And fully Haroun, sullen with mistrust
Of all the good and wise that men might say,
Ordained that no man living from that day
Should dare to speak his name on pain of death.
All Araby and Persia held their breath—
All but the brave Mondeer. He, proud to show
How far for love a grateful soul could go
And facing death for very scorn and grief
For his great heart, wanted a great relief,
Stood forth in Bagdad daily, in the square
Where one had stood a happy house, and there
Harangued the tremblers at the scimitar
Of all they owed to the divine Jaffar.

"Bring me this man!" the caliph cried. The man
Was brought; was gazed upon. The mutes began
To block his arms. "Welcome, brave coros!" cried he.
"From bonds far worse Jaffar delivered me;
From wants, from shames, from loveless household hatred,
Make a man's eyes friends with delicious tears;
Instead, instead, let me, I pray you, a par
With his great still. How can I pray Jaffar?"

"To one who felt that on a soul like this
The angels of a single once could but fall amiss,
Seemed to spoil, as one great word of fate
Spoken upon another had its great,
Haroun, long silent, gave judgment as it will,
Which was that he should be master still.
Then, ere the mute could move, there came this gem,
The last that the Faithful knew:
Ali, the Barmecide, the good, and, holding Jaffar's head in the heaven, as though to meet his kin,
Said, "Friends, too, I owe to thee, Jaffar!"

—Leigh Hunt.

Told Over The Samovar

This is the story as Polly told it to the women at the samovar—had luck to the low voice Russian of toasted smile with sugar in her. But the story loses much in coming from the second hand, for the grandeur Polly's tales lies in the telling—in the light of eye, the twitch of mouth, the stamp and the shrug of shoulders and these, by favor of heaven, cannot be put to paper, else all would have my Polly.

Save Polly, of course, was asked by Miss Stanton to spend the night with her—Miss Stanton had moved into a new place during the day and wanted Polly to help her fix up—Polly knows her mind—just where this and that ought to be placed for the best effect. While they were at the house just at dusk—not so late as at home, and the lamp had not been lighted—there came a knock. Miss Stanton had not yet asked for a lamp. For an instant there were consternation and a pair of blank faces. Then the blinds and windows were tried. One of them was not locked. Their faces resumed expression.

"It's mischief, all right," said Miss Stanton in a voice made hopeless by new troubles. "But how are we going to get out? Can you climb?"

Miss Stanton couldn't; that was plain. Miss Stanton is—well, as Polly laughingly hinted at the telling, "she's how she is, you know." And then she spread her hands until about quarters of the width of the table between them. "About so."

"Then I must go for help," said Polly. "Where is the nearest house?"

"Not for a mile," said Miss Stanton.

"Then I must go to the barracks," said Polly.

"Not for the world!" said Miss Stanton.

"Why not?" said Polly.

"Because I—I don't want to see the man who owns the house coming in the door just as I go out of it," said Miss Stanton.

"Why, he wouldn't—" said Polly.

"He would!" said Miss Stanton.

"Why, he wouldn't dare—" said Polly.

"He would!" said Miss Stanton.

"Why, he wouldn't—" said Polly.

"He would!" said Miss Stanton.

"Why, he—" said Polly.

"He would!" said Miss Stanton.

"Why, he—" said Polly.

story.

"Probably told him that he was a policeman," I suggested.

Polly shook her head as she dropped a slice of lemon into her tea. "No; I think he called him a fool."

"Which is the same," said I, with a feeling that I was very clever. "But how did it all end?"

"It's ended. That's all there is to it."

Polly looked at me in silence for a full minute. But Polly is never long without a word.

"Wasn't it simply awful?" she said, shaking her head with wide expanding solemnity. "It was shocking!"

Then an irrepressible smile dispelled the gravity of her face, and she laughed, her head thrown back just enough to reveal the birdlike pulsings of her throat.

"It was funny, though—isn't it? It wasn't then." Her eyes were [illegible] with mirth tears.

She leaned forward, dropped her head into her hands and gazed at me, half quilling, half blushing.

"You'll never tell, Tom. It's a good joke—don't."

"Tell!" said I, hurt by the suggestion.

"No! of course you won't," said Polly, peeping [illegible]

Mr. Beecher tore off a two column headline and handed it to the unbeliever. It read, "Robert Burns."

Two years later Ingersoll and Beecher met again in a St. Louis hotel. "I remember your epitaph on me, Mr. Beecher," said Ingersoll, "and I have got one for you. I will read it for you. Born in the slavery of sectarian shackles, hungry and thirsty for freedom and light, he yet died an religious bondage."

Don't Chide the Children.

Don't scold the little ones if the bed is wet in the morning. It isn't the child's fault. It is suffering from a weakness of the kidneys and bladder, and weak kidneys need strengthening—that's all. You can't afford to risk delay. Neglect may entail a lifetime of suffering and misery.

DOAN'S KIDNEY PILLS

strengthen the kidneys and bladder, then all trouble is at an end.

Mrs. E. Kidner, a London, Ont., mother, living at 499 Grey St., says:

"My little daughter, six years old, has had weak kidneys since birth. Last February I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills at Strong's drug store. Since taking them she has had no more kidney trouble of any kind. I gladly make this statement because of the benefit my child has received from this medicine."

A Boer Apology.

"Some years ago," said the Philadelphia Press, "an example of the Boers' strange ideas of justice appeared in the columns of a South African newspaper. It was published by order of the Boer court. One Transvaalian is begging the pardon of another for having slandered him, and this is the form in use, as can be seen today in the files of Di Africaansa Patriot: 'I, the undersigned, —, retract every thing I have said against the innocent Mr. —, calling myself an infamous liar and striking my mouth with the exclamation, "You mendacious mouth, why do you lie so?" I declare further that I know nothing against the character of Mr. —. I call myself, besides, a genuine liar of the first class. (Signed) —. Witnesses, —, —.' Any man who can 'stand for' that is a professional apologist."

Customs Vary.

A correspondent writes thus to the Boston Transcript: "You told in The Transcript recently about a western man who puzzled a Boston car conductor and his passengers by inquiring the way to the capitol. Finally some one divined that he wished to find the statehouse.

"This reminded me of an experience of my own. I was in Richmond and asked six or eight people the way to the statehouse, and no one could tell me. Then I remembered a picture of it labeled 'the capitol' and was informed by the next one I met that the capitol was two blocks ahead.

"The day was Christmas. I had had one very quiet Fourth of July that year in the country, but it was made up to me on Christmas for every one in Richmond seemed fully occupied exploding crackers."
